Integrating Motivational Interviewing in Addiction Treatment

February 16-17, 2015

Develop and enhance your knowledge of and skills in motivational interviewing (MI) with this two-day workshop featuring the co-developer of motivational interviewing and world-renowned scientist, William R. Miller, PhD, and motivational interviewing expert, Alyssa A. Forcehimes, PhD.

This two-day workshop will provide an up-to-date orientation to the clinical method of motivational interviewing (MI) and how it can be combined with other evidence-based treatment methods, including Interactive Journaling®, cognitive-behavioral therapy and 12-Step facilitation. The integration of MI into treatment programs and systems will also be addressed. The workshop will provide a balance of didactic presentation, demonstration, experiential practice and discussion.
William R. Miller, PhD

William R. Miller, PhD, introduced the method of motivational interviewing in 1983, and is senior author of the source textbook, now in a new 3rd edition (2013). He has worked in addiction treatment for over 40 years, developing and evaluating therapeutic approaches, including MI, behavior therapies, the community reinforcement approach and CRAFT. A recipient of several career awards including the Jellinek Memorial Award for his alcoholism research, he also maintains an active interest in the interface of psychology, spirituality and addiction. He has authored over 40 books and 400 articles, and the Institute for Scientific Research lists him among the world’s most cited scientists. He is a Senior Consultant for The Change Companies®.

Alyssa A. Forcehimes, PhD

Alyssa A. Forcehimes, PhD, is on the faculty of Psychiatry at the University of New Mexico Health Sciences Center and is the Executive Director of Train for Change Inc., the training branch of The Change Companies®. Dr. Forcehimes’ work centers on developing effective methods for disseminating and teaching evidence-based approaches for behavior change to multidisciplinary professionals nationwide. Dr. Forcehimes has conducted over 150 on-site motivational interviewing trainings for diverse practice settings and a wide range of patient populations. She has authored several treatment manuals describing integrated approaches of motivational interviewing and cognitive-behavioral therapy for use in community-based programs. With Drs. Miller and Zweben she co-authored Treating Addiction: A Guide for Professionals (2011). She has also authored numerous articles and chapters on motivational interviewing.
